

Am I entitled to super?

Use this tool to check if you are entitled to super guarantee contributions from your employer.

Last updated 21 December 2016

This tool helps you understand whether you are entitled to super guarantee contributions from your employer.

Am I entitled to super?

What this tool gives you

After answering some questions about the working arrangement between you and your employer, you will receive a decision advising whether you are entitled to super from that employer.

The information you provide and the answers you select are not stored. You will remain anonymous at all times.

If you are entitled to super, but believe your employer has not been paying enough, you can:

- use our Estimate my super tool to calculate how much super your employer should have paid
- use our Report unpaid super contributions from my employer tool to let us know your employer has not been paying enough super.

See also:

- Estimate my super tool
- Report unpaid super contributions from my employer tool

Our commitment to you

We are committed to providing you with accurate, consistent and clear information to help you understand your rights and entitlements and meet your obligations.

If you follow our information and it turns out to be incorrect, or it is misleading and you make a mistake as a result, we will take that into account when determining what action, if any, we should take.

Some of the information on this website applies to a specific financial year. This is clearly marked. Make sure you have the information for the right year before making decisions based on that information.

If you feel that our information does not fully cover your circumstances, or you are unsure how it applies to you, contact us or seek professional advice.

Copyright notice

© Australian Taxation Office for the Commonwealth of Australia

You are free to copy, adapt, modify, transmit and distribute this material as you wish (but not in any way that suggests the ATO or the Commonwealth endorses you or any of your services or products).